Sir Richard Attenborough died at the age of 90. The internationally admired director of the monumental 'Gandhi', he was more familiar in the western world as an actor in British movies. He played the role of the detective in Agatha Christie's famous 'Mousetrap'. In 1963, the great war film 'The Great Escape', made him a Hollywood star. That performance established him in Hollywood forever. He won back-to-back Golden Globe awards for best supporting actor in 'The Sand Pebble's (1966) and Dr. Doolittle', (1967).

'Gandhi (1982), an epic but intimate portrayal was his greatest triumph. Ben Kingsley, in the title role, traces the life and times of Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi's work from a small town lawyer into the world of fierce racial politics. From the 'Karaals' of Africa to the dusty bylanes of rural U.P., it was indeed a long walk for the gentle giant who truly embodies India. Long suffering yet patient. Humiliated yet dignified. 'Gandhi' was nominated for a stupendous 11 Academy Awards and won 8, including the sole Indian winner, Bhanu Athya, for costume designing.

When Attenboroug wanted to make the movie, a white producer famously said that no one would be interested in a movie about a brown man carrying a beanstalk ! Attenboroug then decided to produce it himself. He mortgaged his house in a London suburb, sold works of art and even ended up not being able to pay his gas bill ! The movie cost $22 million dollars and ended up earning twenty times the cost ! 'Gandhi' was a hit, to use a catchphrase. More than that, it earned a bit of respect 'for brown' Indians !
